History Lesson...

Langhorne Borough was originally Four Lanes End—a name that derives from the fact that the site was at the crossroads for travelers from Philadelphia to the Delaware River and Trenton, New Jersey with the road from Bristol north to upper Bucks County and the Durham Furnace.

In the mid twentieth century, the “crossroads” was shifted a block to the east. Route 413, the major road from Bristol to Newtown, Doylestown and beyond, was altered to use Pine Street, a block to the east, of Bellevue Avenue.

This move undoubtedly saved the core of the village but deprives most travelers the opportunity to see the real historic core of Langhorne.
